1.

1. Create a web page with an input field and a button, and add the following functionality:

• When the button is clicked, get the value of the input field and display it in a new paragraph element.

• If the input field is empty, display an error message in a separate div element.

2. Write a JQuery script to count the number of words in a string. Get the string input through a textbox.

After clicking "click" button: